Jessica Darfoor is a second year English Major and Computer Science minor from Andover, Massachusetts. In addition to NU Writing club, she is a campus tour guide as a member of Husky Ambassadors and a correspondent for Northeastern's Fashion and Retail Society. In her free time she can be found listening to Beyoncé, making her famous French toast, and rereading The Catcher in the Rye for the 10th time.

Melissa Fitzgerald is a sophomore English and Media and Screen Studies major. She dreams of becoming a world-renowned author. Until then, she'd like to help others become world-renowned authors. She is known for falling asleep in loud, crowded places, watching every movie Sandra Bullock's ever been in, and putting Nutella on just about anything.

Lindsay McCallum is a senior English major from Danvers, Massachusetts. She is completing her undergraduate degree in Iceland this summer and then hopes to begin a career in writing and editing. She is a lover of children's books, the Oxford comma, lists of three and breaking her own rules.

Ivy Pepin is a first year English major originally from Keene, New Hampshire. Along with NU Writing, she is involved with Spectrum literary arts magazine, and she tutors at the RMSC in Roxbury each week. She spends time hiking, playing guitar, writing, and trying to improve her sense of direction in beautiful (and confusing) Boston.
